Q1:

Improve the key elements already present.

Q2:

Ideally, to separate at an equal degree the different kinds of subjects.

Q3:

No, it should not affect the judgement.

Q4:

No, they should all be considered equally.

Q5:

No, it should not. Yes to the second.

Q6:

No, it should not.

Q7:

No, they should not.

Q8:

Yes, they should.

Q9:

No, it should not.

Q10:

No, it should not.

Q11:

As many variables that can be identified.

Q12:

By not over-reacting. The internet is complex and many will see an incentive somewhere to attack from over-reaction.

Q13:

By their parents.

Q14:

Less free content.

Q15:

Either by being on everything, or nothing.

Q16:

Very minimal, we have no reason to fear media.

Q17:

Yes, they should.

Q18:

Children's games.

Q19:

No, they should all be treated equally.

Q20:

They are fairly straight-forward.

Q21:

No, there is not. And no, there isn't.

Q22:

Have a standard for classification.

Q23:

The first one.

Q24:

None at all.

Q25:

No, it does not. Nothing should be censored.

Q26:

No, they are not.

Q27:

A legislative scheme that would stop spending money on a classification board.

Q28:

To the Commonwealth if need be.

Q29:

It shouldn't.

Other comments:

There are better ways to spend our money-this is one of them.
