Q1:

Improving key elements of the existing framework.

Q2:

A consistent classification of material accross all forms of media and platforms.

Q3:

No, there should be one framework for all technologies and platform, as this is important to futureproof against new technologies and platforms.

Q4:

No, there should be one rule for all and there should be no loopholes or exceptions.

Q5:

No, there should be one rule for all and there should be no loopholes or exceptions.

Yes, all content across all media irrespective of who it's designed for should be classified; this ensures that parents can make informed decisions about the content they wish their children to see, as all content is classified consistently.

Q6:

No, there should be one rule for all and there should be no loopholes or exceptions.

Q7:

Yes, artwork should be subject to classification, however i don't believe it should be censored.

Q8:

Yes

Q9:

No, there should be one rule for all and there should be no loopholes or exceptions.

Q10:

Yes, this should be taken into account when determining the classification.

Q11:

All content needs to be classified for the purpose of consumer advice, however it should not be censored.

Q12:

I believe the most effective method to control access to online content is for parents to make informed decisions based on the classification framework, discuss with their children and be in charge of controlling access as they see fit.

Q13:

This should be solely up to the children's parents.

Q14:

The current processes are sufficient, such as sealed packaging and age verification by ID card.

Q15:

If content is classified, the necessary markings/warnings MUST be shown, no exceptions.

Q16:

To determine the classification guidelines.

Q17:

No, I believe the current arrangements are the better option.

Q18:

Only General (G) rated material.

Q19:

Q20:

On the whole, yes, the existing classification categories are understood. The inconsistent categories across different media types cause confusion, such as there being no R rating for video games.

Q21:

I believe the current categories work well and don't need to be modified.

Q22:

Classify ALL media formats in the same manner and use consistent markings.

Q23:

Yes, definitely. The classification of ALL media types should be consolidated.

Q24:

I don't believe ANY content should be entirely prohibited online, as that's a censorship issue, not classification.

Q25:

No. This category should only be used for content that is deemed illegal in Australia.

Q26:

Yes, I believe that consistency across all states and territories is imperative and should be promoted by the Federal government making the classification of ALL content consistent.

Q27:

A nationally consistent scheme.

Q28:

Yes, I believe this to be important.
