

CI 45 J Papajcsik

First name: Joseph

Last name: Papajcsik

Q1: Developing a new framework

Q2: Prevent the distribution of material that violates community standards or is harmful., The scheme should not be pushing the boundries of community standards rather reflecting community's standards.

Q3: No

Q4: No

Q5: Yes and Yes

Q6: No

Q7: Yes

Q8: Yes

Q9: No

Q10: No

Q11: nil

Q12: The user must be registered prior to gaining access to restricted sites

Q13: Registration of users

Q14: Registration of users

Q15: In advertisements, prior to commencement and during the viewing

Q16: Government agencies should set all the parameters

Q17: No as industry has a vested interest and self-regulation rarely works well

Q18: None

Q19: None and No

Q20: Yes I believe that present classifications are understood

Q21: The categories are adequate however the allowable content within the categories seems to be becoming more explicit in terms of sex, violence etc

Q22: Greater minds than mine need to work this out

Q23: Yes

Q24: Pornography (especially child porn) and excessive violence

Q25: I don't know

Q26: Yes it certainly is and the implementation thereof is your call

Q27: Yes it should be replaced and I don't know

Q28: Yes most certainly

Q29: For magazines follow the USA model and place such out of reach of children with the front page being blanked out except for the magazine's name. High levels of violence in video games is unnecessary and definitely detrimental in the long term to children's behavioural patterns. Explicit and even "Abnormal" sex scenes according to studies in Victoria have a serious and negative impact on behavioural patterns especially in youth.

Other comments: The distribution of violent video games and easy accessibility to pornographic materials is changing the community's understanding of what is normal and acceptable. Studies in Victoria have drawn a strong connection with the accessibility to porn etc and detrimental societal impacts however this link is generally brushed aside by the "educated elite" of our society in their ivory towers of academia.

File 1:

File 2: