My comment to this review is as follows:-

The classification system is aimed at allowing material to be presented that is distasteful, degrading, immoral, violent, embarrassing, demeaning, display exploitation, show a disregard for human life, everything that is bad and leads to a lowering of standards.

Should we not be aiming for improving standards, encouraging improvements in entertainment, language, literature etc. We live in an age where quality is expected in all the material goods available, consumers want better things, safe and reliable. Why not aim to improve the quality of the material that now needs to be classified. We would then need less classification and less control.

Take Mary Poppins as an example. Its success speaks volumes. Presentation of material that is true, honest, just, purity, lovely, virtuous, a celebration and of good report will do more for the betterment of our community than trying to control what is the opposite.
