“Question 1: In this Inquiry, should the ALRC focus on developing a new framework for classification, or improving key elements of the existing framework? ”

My answer was as following:

The Australian Law Reform Commission should focus upon improving the key elements of the existing framework as the existing criteria are logical and coherent, they simply need ‘cleaning up’. The framework lacks specifications and therefore appears to have double standards, allowing some games yet disallowing games with similar content. If the framework was specified, and heavily described in detail, it would relieve the frustration of misunderstanding the criteria.
