Q1:

New Framework, as the current is out-dated, unusable in this age, unworkable for the industry.

Q2:

To have a fair and balanced classification for all, and so the majority of adult gamers can enjoy any game they wish.

Q3:

No

Q4:

Sure, if warranted then it can be subject to investigation.

Q5:

Q6:

absolutely not, all producers big or small should be handled just like any other company.

Q7:

Not at all, this is not a requirement in other countries.

Q8:

Sure.

Q9:

Irrelevant to the situation, all games should be under the classification.

Q10:

We're talking about games here, which can be accessed both in public and at homes, it shouldn't get a factor in classification however, all games should be treated with classification.

Q11:

Q12:

Organise with the content providers to hide content if required, this can be done by cookie management or IP restrictions that the website can do easily.

Q13:

Awareness, target parents and let them understand what is out there on the internet.

Q14:

Parenting awareness campaigns, outlets having tighter restrictions such as ID upon purchase, all magazines and books to be covered.

Q15:

All content should be displayed with classification.
