

CI 1168 J Allen

First name: James

Last name: Allen

Q1:

A new framework.

Q2:

To more accurately reflect the contemporary media environment. The current system restricts adults in their access to materials readily available to adults in other countries. However, children are frequently being exposed to unsuitable material. The new system should address these two issues.

Q3:

Yes. Materials broadcast via radio and television is more likely to be observed by children than material obtained via other means. It is also not feasible to classify the content of the entire internet.

Q4:

Yes.

Q5:

Yes.

Q6:

Yes. The classification system should reflect the values of the community. If there is significant demand for particular content, it holds that the content is acceptable to the values of a significant portion of the community.

Q7:

Yes.

Q8:

Yes.

Q9:

The classification system should reflect the values of the community. If there is a significant audience for particular content, it holds that the content is acceptable to the values of a significant portion of the community.

Q10:

Q11:

Q12:

Q13:

By educating parents in their responsibilities to supervise childrens access to the internet. Tools and methods to allow parents to better regulate access by children to the internet should be made available. Mandatory internet filtering should not be considered a viable option in addressing this issue.

Q14:

Q15:

Q16:

Q17:

Q18:

Q19:

Q20:

Q21:

Q22:

Q23:

Q24:

Q25:

Q26:

Q27:

Q28:

Q29:

Other comments: