Q1:

Improvement.

Q2:

It should not be used as a way censor, but to clearly show consumers what they can expect when buying media.

Q3:

No. Physical and digital copies should be treated the same.

Q4:

All content should be classified and then the choice be left to the consumer.

Q5:

Yes. Adults are able to then make choices for their children.

Q12:

Left to parent/guardian/adult. It is impossible to control all online activities through Government. There must be some onus on people to look after themselves.

Q13:

Through appropriate adult supervision. There also exist free programs and schemes to block unwanted content from minors. It is not the Governments role to police everything.

Q15:

Q16:

Government and industry should work together to create a system that informs consumers about what they can expect from media. It is ultimately up to consumers to make the final judgement. Censorship should only be used in extreme cases e.g. child porn, torture, terrorism.
