

CI 1270 M Creaser

First name: Mark

Last name: Creaser

Q1:

Q2:

Appropriate control of access to content for young people and legal, legitimate access to a much broader range of content for adults than is currently allowed.

Q3:

Q4:

Q5:

Q6:

Q7:

Definitely not

Q8:

No

Q9:

Q10:

Q11:

Q12:

Q13:

Q14:

Q15:

When sold in public retail outlets

Q16:

Q17:

Q18:

Q19:

Q20:

R and X categories - many people are unaware of the current scope of restricted material.

Q21:

Q22:

Q23:

Q24:

Child exploitation material, although more resources should be used to apprehend creators and distributors of this material.

Q25:

No - RC Category is far too broad especially with regard to video games and explicit adult content. It excludes almost all legitimate fetishes and a large amount of sexual behaviour now considered acceptable or at least not as taboo as it once was.

Q26:

Yes

Q27:

Q28:

Q29:

Other comments:

I find it quite horrifying that movies like Saw or Hostel which are essentially 90 minutes of graphic torture are allowed, and even promoted, while large amounts of sexually explicit adult material covering sexual behaviour which many people enjoy is currently Refused Classification and therefore illegal. I believe rectifying this situation is a high priority.

Lack of consistency in video game classification and the unnecessary banning of high-profile titles is also a critical issue.