Q1:

The classification system in Australia needs to be fully reviewed and have an R18 rating added.

Q2:

A national classification scheme should define suitable age groups for certain content and be used to restrict the sale/distribution of adult materials to minors. Many have argued that adding an R18 classification for video games will allow children to buy these violent or offensive games, but the whole point of the classification is to ensure that said games would not be sold to under-age individuals.

Q3:

No. Distribution method should have no effect on classification, provided the age of the customer can be proved.

Q4:
