Q10:

Q11:

The principal should always be - open access for the public; it is not the government's job to monitor or limit my personal activities

Q12:

Outside real paedophilia - there should be no restrictions to what I can access.

Q13:

Children are the responsibility of parents, in this area. It should not impact on my viewing or access

Q14:

It shouldn't be restricted, beyond preventing the exploitation of children

Q15:

question is vague

Q16:

I see no role, in general, in restricting access - if activities are illegal - we already have laws to cover that and it is for the police to act under the law.

Q17:

perhaps

Q18:

??

Q19:

no idea - who pays now ?

Q20:

Yes they are understood - most stuff doesn't need classification; it strikes me as a waste of time and money classify everything. Ludicrous - only classify R-rated

Q21:

A/above: only R-rated needs to be shown, everything else is OK and it's up too parental decision.

R=Rated gamed should be available in Australia

Providing that the Commonwealth can refrain from excess legislation and the restriction of my access, yes !

Q29:

a/above - only classify stuff that is really not suitable for kids - and by this I mean violence, not sex or nudity - which should not be subject to classification or restriction IMO

Other comments:

The government should limit its involvement in individual choices and particularly resist limiting our choices. Democracy is about maximising the freedom for the individual. I do not need to be told what I can or cannot access - I trust my own judgement for that. I was also quite capable of discussing these things with my children or making decisions on their behalf when they were young - such things are an integral part of parenting.

WE have adequate laws about Paedophilia - beyond that open access, please.
