

CI 1361 F Smith

First name: Frank

Last name: Smith

Q1:

Q2:

Q3:

No

Q4:

Q5:

Q6:

Q7:

Q8:

Q9:

Q10:

Q11:

Q12:

Q13:

Q14:

Q15:

Q16:

Q17:

Q18:

Q19:

Q20:

Q21:

Q22:

Q23:

Q24:

Q25:

Q26:

Q27:

Q28:

Q29:

Other comments:

If video games have the same classification process as movies and television programs then the process is simple as there is already a procedure. The majority of people complaining about a R18+ rating for video don't play video games, some maybe parents with understandable concerns but as with an R18+ rating for movies and such they could not be hired or seen in cinemas without proper identification and predictably most will reply that such regulations are easily avoided. Ignorantly they fail to realise that the same procedure is just as simple to avoid with movies and television shows. In most cases this is just another pathetic example of incompetent parents who cannot control their kids trying to point the finger of blame at something else, probably the same idiots that blame teachers for their child's lack of discipline or the self proclaimed doctors that diagnose their kids with A.D.D

Apologies for the sweeping generalization but it is just ridiculous that this has not been approved yet.