

CI 1392 A Berglas

First name: Anthony

Last name: Berglas

Q1:

New Framework

Q2:

Minimal interference with people's right to content. Evidence based.

Q3:

The internet should not be censored.

Q4:

Content should not be required to be classified.

Q5:

There is no market for inappropriate children's content. If it aint broke don't fix it.

Q6:

Niche content should not be classified.

Q7:

no.

Q8:

No.

Q9:

Niche content should not be classified.

Q10:

Tomorrow, all content is internet, so is available at home. So question is irrelevant. Broadcast television is over.

Q11:

Demonstrated need. Which there isn't.

Q12:

There are no effective methods.

Q13:

Parental control. Education. There are minimal controls now, and no evidence of damage.

Q14:

Don't bother.

Q15:

Never required. But could be useful for marketing children's products.

Q16:

Minimal. Certainly do not encourage self censorship via draconian penalties.

Q17:

No.

Q18:

If it is obvious why bother doing it.

Q19:

Whenever the government insists that it be done. Which it should not.

Q20:

Most people do not really care.

Q21:

No.

Q22:

Drop them.

Q23:

If there must be classification, then add R to games.

Q24:

None.

Q25:

No content should be prohibited. Sticks and stones...

Q26:

No need for consistency. Chaos encourages innovation.

Q27:

None.

Q28:

No. States are much more accessible to people's will than the commonwealth.

Q29:

Remove it.

Other comments:

Censoring the internet is a really bad idea.
