Q1:

There is no need to develop an entirely new framework as the existing framework for films could easily be applied to video games. This would also include the R18+ that is needed by the industry right now.

Q2:

The introduction of an R18+ rating on games and the re-classification of R rated games that have been labeled as MA15+ i.e. Alien vs Predator 2

Q3:

PS3 and Xbox360's already come with built in child protection software to stop children playing adult games - its about leaving its use up to the parent. However the game itself should only be reclassified if the content changes from platform to platform i.e. more blood and gore on the PS3 version for example.

Q4:

If the game or film has been branded by its producer at an unsuitable rating and a complain is made, the game or film should be put up for re-classification, that is all.

Q5:

All games and videos should carry a classification. Considering that gamers can now be as old a 3 years old, classifications across the board allow parents and consumers to make informed decisions

Self-regulation by the industry

Q13:

In home protection software. This choice should be left as a choice by the consumer, no one else can make this decision for someone else unless it is for a parent to their child.

Q14:

Self regulation. Adults can choose whether or not they wish to view pornographic material because that is within their rights, it is also their right if they want to put in place child protection software in their own homes.

Q15:

Only warnings for pornographic material

Q16:

None for government agencies and industry bodies, the incompetence of these bodies would have destructive consequences on our personal freedoms. It is up to users whether or not they wish to view certain content online.

Q17:

Yes

Q18:

Case by case basis. Internet should not be classified, Games should be - with the understanding that it would include an R rating, Films are fine as is

Q19:

All films should be classified

Q20:

The removal of an R rating from games is still the cause of much confusion. Put it back!

Q21:

R rating on Games is desperately needed.

Q22:

Q23:

Yes

Q24:

None should be prohibited - the really bad pornography is not shared through the open internet.

Q25:

Refused Classification is a ridiculous classification as it does not set any guidelines for those who do wish to see the content. Nothing should ever be classified under this stupid classification
