Last name: Madden

Q1:

I believe the ALRC should focus on developing the R18+ classification law

Q2:

To target requests by the public such as an introduction of the R18+ status of interactive media for Australians

Q3:

Yes, because although there is good and bad in most contents, proper classification aids people of all ages

Q4:

No, All content should be classified with the correct terms to steer the use of said content in the right direction.

Q5:

The potential impact of anything varies extremely and depends solely on the individual that chooses to use the content. All content should be classified from content suitable for 10 year olds, right up to the harsher content that is only suitable for 18+

Q6:

The size of the position or particular content producers and distributors should not affect the rating system that is applied. All content should be classified according to the degree of seriousness it belongs to.

Q7:

Artwork should be to the viewers discretion as when or whether it is viewed. Parents and/or guardians of the age 18+ should decide what content their children see.

Q8:

Yes, depending on the content. If the content contains offensive or inappropriate material it should be classified, however, the offensive degree of the material should not be refused classification on the premise that it is not able to sell, the viewing of the content should be to the viewers discretion

Q9:

All content should be classified to its respective category.

Q10:

All content should be classified to its respective category.

Q11:

Nothing, the classification of content should be applied to every media but never should it be refused because of its content
