Q1:

A new framework, trying to enforce old media classification on the internet is painful to watch

Q2:

it should allow the viewer/user understand what a particular type of media contains so they have some idea of what to expect when they use/watch it. It should be used to keep media out of the use of adults

Q3:

well australia is not going to classify every web page that is hosted here. that would be unfeasible and unworkable. So it should depend on the tech

Q4:

No because you may have content that has been used/view thousand/million etc times with no complaints but only because one person has some moral outrage shouldn't be enough to have it classified. otherwise you would get something dumb like people wanting photos of plankton classified or whatever is the moral outrage of the month

Q5:

again are you going to classify every website, app etc how would this be enforced with sites hosted outside of australia. are they going to be banned because they don't have an Oz classification. Also children presumably should be using content that is monitored by their parents

Q6:

no

Q7:

really? No, it shouldn't be. is modern art going to be more likely censored than say The Birth of Venus. No this is a terrible idea

Q8:

Too many swear words and you get banned? or is there going to be a clause that music can't be banned despite its lyrics.

Q9:

no

Q10:

no

Q11:

Q12:

What are you trying to control. i don't want to see stuff being restricted because of some knee jerk reaction about protecting children.

Q13:

Yeah better education for their parents, they are the ones who need to be in charge of what and how their children use the internet. they have jsut as much chance of finding dad's downloaded porn/magazines as finding it on websites

Q14:

I didn't realise this was a problem. i'm not sure in this day and age who will buy porn when it is possible to get if for free. Give it 10 years and this won't be a problem as it will have died a natural death

Q15:

on the packaging, on an intro page

Q16:

as little as possible, trust adults to make adult decisions

Q17:

probably

Q18:

Q19:

no

Q20:

video games

Q21:

video games, most gamers are over 18,

Q22:

yes

Q23:

Q24:

CP, thats about it, you'll see msot everything else on the news channels anyways, killing,check, genocide, wikipedia that,

Q25:

probably not as it is made by a different generation that hasn't grown up with the internet and video games

Q26:

yes
