

CI 1581 T Ward

First name: Terence

Last name: Ward

Q1:

Improve existing framework

Q2:

To bring the classification of games more in line with that of movies

Q3:

No, all ways in which we access content should be considered equal

Q4:

No, all content should be classified

Q5:

This question is subjective to the user, what may impact me may not impact another, so why classify it like that. Content designed for children should be classified across all media.

Q6:

No, all content should be classified

Q7:

Yes, it should be treated like all art forms (eg Music, Film)

Q8:

Yes it should

Q9:

No, all content should be classified

Q10:

No

Q11:

Q12:

It shouldn't be up to the Government to control who accesses what content but more up to parents

Q13:

There are many options already in place on computers that can easily restrict content to children, There should be more education given to parents about this

Q14:

Higher penalties for breaking laws dealing with selling to underage people

Q15:

at least once before actual content is viewed/observed , doesn't matter where.

Q16:

Government should be involved with people selling/distributing the content enforcing that they don't sell to people underage

Q17:

Q18:

Q19:

No, should be treated just like the rest

Q20:

Yes the existing categories are understood, the only problem with them is that they are not consistently applied.

Q21:

No need for new classification

Q22:

Q23:

Not familiar with these guidelines, but games should be brought to the same standards as films when classified felony content, eg someone raping or killing someone in real life, child porn, real life torture.

Q24:

Q25:

Q26:

No state and territory decisions regarding classification should be abolished and made way for federal laws.

Q27:

Commonwealth has full control of legislation when concerning classification

Q28:

Yes, as the content is not bound to state borders

Q29:

Less emphasis on government controlling content and more on parents getting involved and being able to make informed choices through better education. All content should be available to anyone who meets an age requirement

Other comments:

No matter what you do someone's going to complain. The government doesn't raise children so why should it be responsible what content they view. In the end content should be available but it's up to the parents if they let their kids view it or not.
