

CI 1616 M Creasey

First name: Matthew

Last name: Creasey

Q1:

The ALRC should focus on developing a new framework.

Q2:

To provide a clarity about content so people can make an informed choice.

Q3:

Yes. The overall experience should be considered when making a classification.

Q4:

No. Classification should be a guide, and complaints shouldn't be used as the driving mechanism to decide what classification content should be given/

Q5:

Yes the impact should be considered, but this needs to be backed by studies not personal opinion and anecdote. Classification should provide information about what the content contains, not it's suitability for children per se.

Q6:

No, classification should be provided for all media. As yet unclassified material should not however be illegal.

Q7:

Classification of artworks is fine to provide consumer advice, but it should be a different type of classification to entertainment media and shouldn't be used for restricting access.

Q8:

Yes.

Q9:

No.

Q10:

No.

Q11:

None.

Q12:

I don't think access should be controlled or restricted to content. It should just be classified. If content isn't legal, such child pornography it should be a matter for law enforcement, not classification boards.

Q13:

By giving parents and others' charged with the care of children better information about what content is available online and more education on how to control access to such content.

Q14:

I think current means are sufficient

Q15:

Whenever practical

Q16:

The role of government should be to provide reliable information about the content to allow adults to make informed decisions.

Q17:

Possibly.

Q18:

Books, Games, Most online content.

Q19:

Q20:

Q21:

Possibly, more study is needed

Q22:

Study needed

Q23:

Yes, however the code require more flexibility

Q24:

Only content where illegal acts where used in it's production.

Q25:

No. The only content that should be illegal is content where illegal acts where used in it's production.

Q26:

Yes, powers should be referred

Q27:

A classification scheme only, no legal restrictions (other than illegal content)

Q28:

Yes

Q29:

Other comments: