First name: Blake

Last name: Dobe

Q1:

Yes the current rating system is out of date, and far behind the rest of the world.

Q2:

Bring classification standards in line with the rest of our media and the common worlds

Q3:

No, regardless of classification of material on any format, if someone wants to view it it will be viewed, and piracy will probably be the means, seeing as other roads will be closed.

Q4:

No, there will always be someone unhappy about something regardless how absurd. ie planking, people now complaining that planking is racist, If one wishes to find fault a little creativity will be able to link any thought/activity with something negative.

Q5:

Ratings need to be standardised not blocked.

Q6:

No

Q7:

Standardisation across all common media.

Q8:

Yes

Q9:

No

Q10:

No

Q11:

A standardised classification system that allows adults/parents/guardians to make appropriate decisions on what to purchase for themselves or others.

Q12:

Parental responsibility

Q13:

Parents raising their children not the TV or computer

Q14:

It can't, parents need to become more active in their children's upbringing

Q15:

When being sold at a public vendor.

Q16:

Just to do their job, the new classification will indicate their roles

Q17:

Nearly anything would be more practical than what is currently in place.

Q18:

Anything not aimed at people under the age of 15

Q19:

Yes

Q20:

They are very straight forward, just need an adult rating and an adjustment as to what should be considered adult content in this day and age.

Q21:

Definitely, when one item can get through our current ratings board, and another with nearly identical themes or visuals can't. It is more than time to take a look.

Q22:

Make them consistent with television and movie standards.

Q23:

I have not read all publications so can not say.

Q24:

No one can stop anything from being online, if it exists it will make its way on to the internet.

Q25:

The current RC standard is ridiculous and needs to be abolished. With the few games that get put onto the RC list seem to get put on there at a whim of whoever is listening to the publishers proposal.

Q26:

Yes, Make decisions federal law.

Q27:

Q28:

Definitely not, Australia can make decisions for itself, without the need to seek help from outside

Q29:

Allow adult classifications and make it a classification. So that what we view and see is no longer dictated by religious zealots.
