Q1:

The framework is clearly not intended for new media. A new framework is required. And new people need to run it to avoid the obvious cluelessness of the existing staff.

Q2:

To insure that adult material is not sold to people under 18. Yes we need an 18+ rating so we can "think of the children"

Q3:

Yes. The platform defines the nature of the media.

Q4:

It is impractical to expect every piece of media to be inspected.

Q5:

The impact of content is a highly subjective statement. Define the potential impact? If it is a potential that i hit someone on the head with my piece of media is that media then judged on that?

Q6:

No

Q7:

No

Q8:

Yes

Q9:

No

Q10:

Yes

Q11:

I dont think anyone has a right to decide if i should see something but obviously the powers that be are a fan of controlling our communications. Perhaps the great potential for censorship to evolve into oppression should temper our attempts to control what people see.

Q12:

There is no effective way. In the same way you cant censor a telephone call you cant control the net.

Q13:

By having parents that pay attention and dont export responsibility to the state.

Q14:

You guys like the word control dont you? Maybe you guys should hand in your tv remotes because its obvious that no 1 person can be trusted to be an adult.

Q15:

Just show the classification so its an indicator of the intended audience. Dont give consumer advice its insulting and pointless beyond showing the classification

Q16:

Government Agencies should respond to complaints, Industry bodies should make sure there content is appropriate and users should try to be an adult and not let other people decide if they find something wrong rather than some people decided based on there respective world views.

Q17:

Q18:

Q19:

Yes. If the cost is unachievable by smaller content producers how do you think we will get any new players in the content market? Not subsidising is just going to help large companies continue there monopoly.

Q20:

No, and it appears the people applying the classifications dont understand either.

Q21:

Just allow 18+ content in games.

Q22:

Q26:

One law to rule them all. Unless people are more or less able to make decisions based on the state they reside in.
