Q1:

A new framework should be put in place to better support the current selection of media platforms.

Q2:

For people to make the informed choice, not limit them by refusing classification.

Q3:

Q4:

No, But it depends what social group(s) of people find the material offense and what is the percentage of that social group(s) that find it offense. And if a larger enough percentage of that social group(s) are the only ones offend by the material then a warning should be put into place for that social group(s), but still allowing people to make the choice.

Q5:

It depends scale of that impact. and Yes.

Q6:

Yes

Q7:

Yes for providing advice to the consumer and restricting access, but if the person decides to choose that artwork it shouldn't be censored.

Q8:

Yes, All mass media should be regulated.

Q9:

No

Q10:

Yes. In a public performance you can't always say no one will be offend, but in a home enviroment you have choose to purchase the material, and if you are then offend then its your own fault for purchasing it in the first place.

Q11:

Target audience, Different audiences have different values. For example: A horror movie club might find a movie to be quite subdue, but the general public might find it too much. So should the horror movie club not have access to there desired material? No, A warning should be in place to inform the public of the material they are purchasing.

Q12:

Education NOT restriction. No online restriction can't stop you, it simply slows you down. Better education would enable people to know why they shouldn't view a certain material.

Q13:

Education.

Q14:

I think the current level of control is fine.

Q15:

When it is deemed necessary by a large enough mixed group of people in society.

Q16:

Too inform the public in the choice they are making, NOT make the choice for them.

Q17:

Yes, because the industry is usually made up target audience. for example: the video game industry

Q18:

Extremes. eg: a non stop bloody horror movie is obvious going to be R18+, where as most childrens shows will be G, PG.

Q19:

Unsure.

Q20:

M15+, alot of children (under 15yrs old) view this level of material, and this is general accepted OK.

Q21:

The region between PG and MA, is rather blurred

Q22:

Unsure

Q23:

Yes

Q24:

Obviously child abuse. Simply saying no isn't going to stop people finding new ways. Education is a better idea.

Q25:

Unsure

Q26:

There should be a simple national classication law.

Q27:

Q28:

Yes
