Last name: Cox

Q1:

A new framework for classification is currently required, so that the introduction of a standard R rating can be introduced that will align us with the rest of the civilised world.

Q2:

protection of children VIA a correct and fair rating system

Q3:

No it should not affect the classification as it has been show that no matter the system or technology, unless a full classification system is used some items slip through the gaps.

Q4:

No all content should be classified fairly so no one can cry foul.

Q5:

As I have said, if a fair and full classification system is introduced children getting their hands on the incorect items will stop.

Q6:

No

Q7:

No

Q8:

It all ready is.

Q9:

It should be a fair rating system.

Q10:

No

Q11:

Q12:

The only system that can effectivly control this is, correct actions by the user.

Q13:

The only system that can effectivly control this is, correct actions by the user (parrent).

Q14:

The only system that can effectivly control this is, correct actions by the user.

Q15:

Classification markings should be displayed on the front of packaging in such a fassion that it is not hidden.

Q16:

Government Agencies should be setting the guild lines and checking fairness, Indusrty bodies should comply with the guildlines and users should take the correct action if required.

Q17:

Yes, as the industry current has a better idea of what is being distributed to the public on mass.

Q18:

Sexual products.

Q19:

This would have to be looked at in a case by case manner.

Q20:

The entire system at the moment is a grey system that causes confusion, as none of the systems align at the moment.

Q21:

The entire system at the moment is a grey system that causes confusion, as none of the systems align at the moment.

Q22:

The current markings work as they are know by the user, but the fact that TV, Radio, Movies and Games each currently have a different standard needs to change.

Q23:

Yes

Q24:

This is a very hard question as once you limit something everyone goes out of the way to obtain that item.

Q25:

No

Q26:

yes consistency is required or you start to get double standards.

Q27:

A National Fair and complete classification system.

Q28:

Yes, but they should be given a say into the final outcome.

Q29:

Other comments:

The main point is that Australia NEEDS a Fair and complete classification system that it the same over each state and industry.

Why are the questions repeating themselves, but changing the wording slightly?
