Q1:

make the rating system the same as movies, there is no need to ban games that are explicit, just restrict customers

Q2:

to fairly classify games at the same standard everywhere

Q3:

no, content is the same or very similar regardless

Q4:

no, all content should be subject to the same classification, if an individual or group takes particular offense to something there is no reason to ruin it for other parties

Q5:

yes and yes

Q6:

as said above, all content should be rated equally to the same standards

Q7:

use the same system as movie previews before they are rated

Q8:

yes

Q9:

no

Q10:

no

Q11:

Q12:

Q13:

parents need to take control and figure out how to use child locks or content restriction if they care enough

Q14:

make sure distributors obey laws regarding who has access to the content

Q15:

when it is above the "PG" rating

Q16:

if content is classified properly then there would be little need to regulate it

Q17:

yes

Q18:

most levels of violence and sex are pretty stright forward, but would need to be double checked by a government office

Q19:

if the content is educational or informative it should have a subsidisation

Q20:

yes, only causes confusion for people who dont read the classification properly

Q21:

G, PG, M, M15+, MA, R, X. i think these work pretty well

Q22:

make all markings the same

Q23:

it should be expanded so producers dont have to modify content to be released in australia, it just gets a more mature classification

Q24:

illegal sites, such as bestiality, snuff films, pedophaelia etc

Q25:

no
