

CI 2031 R Creagh

First name: Ryan

Last name: Creagh

Q1:

The old aging framework does not reflect current changes in the mediums that people access, thus, a new framework would be best.

Q2:

Devolving a single standard across games, movies, music.... all forms so that the rules are clear as day.

Q3:

No. If someone kills someone in a game, how is that any different to someone showing you that on a screen, or in a book? Interaction DOES NOT make it worse.

Q4:

No, the notion of this is stupid, You will have media that will slip through the cracks and do more harm than good.

Q5:

Impact of content? No, would you censor Dan Brown's books because it uses subject matter that is taboo?

As for the children the answer is also no... all kiddie games would be a MAX of the current PG rating, so why should it need to be rated?

Q6:

No, Just because X holds the share over Y and Z, does not mean that they should be subjected to any unfair treatment.

Q7:

No, you cant censor the arts, freedom of speech and so on.

Q8:

They are already, are they not?

Q9:

No.

Q10:

It should not affect if it 'should' but 'how'

Q11:

none, judge it on what it is, not on what it is aimed at. You are not going to aim a game like GTA to a 10 year old, nor are you going to aim a playschool DVD to a mid 20's.

Q12:

strategic partnerships with content providers (hulu) One only has to look to the ABC's iView service to see how well that sort of system works.

Q13:

Better parenting.

Q14:

N/A

Q15:

When they are not designed for a child.

Q16:

The government should have no say in this, it should be a co-op between a interdependent body like it is now, and a sample group from the users.

Q17:

By far

Q18:

Anything not aimed at kids.

Q19:

No.

Q20:

Yes, they are crystal clear

Q21:

YES, there is a dire need for the R18+ system for video game systems.

Q22:

fine the way it is.

Q23:

Yes, make the one code of practice, make it nice and easy for people

Q24:

None

Q25:

No

Q26:

no, because it should be a national ruling.

How can someone south of me, be allowed more RC / R18+ style content but not I? Does the border suddenly make you more mature?

Q27:

A national classifications system, where censorship is not needed, where you can watch / play / view / read as you please. The body would be there to warn of the dangers, but not force change.

Q28:

Yes

Q29:

R18+ system for games
