Q1:
Improving key elements of the existing framework should suffice.
Q2:
To keep the public informed about their choices of viewing and gaming, so they can make an educated decision for their children
Q3:
Platform should not have an relevence. It is the content which should be classified
Q4:
all content should have a classification regardless of complaint
Q5:
No I do not think 'potential impact' should be classified, that is then filtering and taking away freedom of choice. Yes content intended for children should be classified across all media as should content for adults.
Q6:
no. Only content should be classified on it's own merit
Q7:
Yes, artwork should be classified to provide consumer advice, not to restrict any access
Q8:
Yes. All content on all platforms should be classified
Q9:
no
Q10: no
Q11:
Q12:
You can't, it would be too expensive and you would also be taking away a parents right to parent their child/ren. The net should be open.
Q13:
By parents paying attention and restricting access in their own homes.
Q14:
I thought it was well controlled as it was Q15:
Again, all content should have an advisory system
Q16:
open panel of people who review content on all platforms. This panel of people should also be constantly changing and have representatives from all age groups.
