Q1:

Yes definitely. An R rating for games is most welcome!

Q2:

To provide a way of making assessments on which games are appropriate for which audience. For example, some violent content needs to be restricted for teens and below, whereas games that were previously banned in Australia would have the potential to become available to an adult market.

Q3:

No. All content needs to be classified in some way to allow for making better, educated decisions.

Q4:

No.

Q5:

Yes it should. Yes again.

Q6:

No. Standards are standards no matter how big the market for the product is.

Q7:

That depends on the nature of the artwork. Certainly some violent material needs to be classified and consumer advice provided, even for an adult audience.

Q8:

Yes, with appropriate recommendations, giving the ability to make sound assessments (pardon the pun) on whether to partake in the media in question.

Q9:

Only in terms of age and maturity of the audience.
