Q1:

The ALRC should focus on developing a new - better structured Classification framework.

Q2:

To keep mature content away from underage users, while also allowing adults access to the material

Q3:

No

Q4:

No, all content should be inspected and given a relevant classification

Q5:

Yes, the more information provided to parents the better their ability to make responsible decisions

Q6:

If the content is Australian made, by an Australian company or person, it should definitely be given more consideration and perhaps leeway (within reason)

Q7:

No

Q8:

This is not really necessary

Q9:

No

Q13:

More education for parents. The online world is a massive part of society now. Parents need to be brought up to date, and need to be aware of the things their children may accidentally or purposefully come across

Q14:

Q15:

When it is on sale. or advertised on television

Q16:

Q17:

Probably not. The industry would always push towards the age range that offers the most sales, which may be too young.

Q18:

News and current affairs programs should be classified relating to how bias/un-biased they are.

Q19:

Yes, if it helps support the industry and helps it grow. The Australian film industry needs all the help it can get.
