Q1:

Improving Key Elements, an R18 rating for Video Games primary, and also a look into improving classification of media, for example, some media is pushed under a MA15+ rating when it quite clearly could be R18, also consistency as some Video Games and Films get harsh ratings where other movies could fit into the Category but are not

Q2:

Q3:

No, Technology and Platform are only a device, there are many forms of being able to view content, classification in no way would affect this

Q4:

No, All content should be reviewed and classified correctly before being made available to the public

Q5:

Q6:

No, Content should be made available to those who can access under the classification, Marketing of Content should have no effect on the classification as some marketing media can be viewed on the internet

Q7:

Q8:

Q9:

No, every person will make their own decision to view the content, audience size could vary between content and would not be a good guide line to work on for classification

Q10:

No

Q11:

Q12:

There should not be any methods to access online content, people should be able to access whatever content they wish, if the content was restricted, there would be other way for a person/s to access the content

Q13:

This should be left to the discretion of parents, and be their decision to use software that can protect their children from content on the internet

Q14:

Q15:

When the content is not suited for a General Audience, this way the consumer can make a decision on whether to view or purchase the content

Q16:

Q17:

Q18:

Q19:

No, All media deserves to go through Classification review, but should be classified correctly for it's audience

Q20:

Classification is straight forward, though some members of the community may be confused and into why Video Games do not have an R18+ rating, as most of countries in the world have this classification and after much debate and deliberation we still don't have one, and some games that should be R18+ get pushed into a MA15+ bracket

Q21:

R18+ Rating for video games, otherwise the currently categories work fine as they are

Q22:

Q24:

Q25:

Q26:

People in Australia should be able to view all the same content under it's classification, classification should not be made different between states
