

CI 393 J Sutor

First name: Jonathan

Last name: Sutor

Q1:

Improving elements to encompass changing technologies and to ensure classifications are wide enough that very little is able to be refused classification

Q2:

Transparency, and to provide a place for all items to exist within the classification system

Q3:

No

Q4:

Yes, this would cut down on a lot of beauracracy

Q5:

Potential impact: no across all media: yes

Q6:

No

Q7:

No

Q8:

Yes

Q9:

No

Q10:

Yes, what people choose to access at home is no business of any classification body

Q11:

Q12:

Parental education, under no circumstance should online content be censored in any way

Q13:

Educating parents

Q14:

Educating parents

Q15:

At time of sale

Q16:

Advce only, nothing should be refused classification

Q17:

Might provide better systems with less interference from professional letter writers like the ACL and other "family" organizations that do not represent real families

Q18:

Television, online content, books, toys

Q19:

None

Q20:

Yes, the confusion comes from there being different categories across different mediums and from certain items being refused classification when they should simply be in the highest category

Q21:

An adult rating for video games to stop games being refused classification, gamers are adults too

Q22:

Just educate people on what they are

Q23:

Yes

Q24:

None. Anything illegal has mechanisms for the police to take action we don't need wowsers from so called "family" groups getting to have content secretly blocked by a secret government blacklist

Q25:

No.

Q26:

Should be federal only

Q27:

Federal system only, with more categories to ensure very very little is ever refused classification

Q28:

Yes

Q29:

Federalize it

Other comments: