Q1:

Yes, the classification system is in need of revamping.

Q2:

To allow adults to have a choice in what they want to watch and view, while giving benchmarks in the form of ratings as what to expect.

Q3:

If you are refering to a classification system that uses one big combined system then yes. ie - M rating for video games is the same for movies.

Q4:

This of course depends on what the content is. What content are you refering too?

Q5:

"Potential impact" is a very opinionistic term. You can't expect an answer when using non specific terms like that one. I was already under the impression chicldrens content was already rated.

Q6:

Don't understand the question.

Q7:

What is art? This is not something I can answer with such a vauge term as "artwork".

Q8:

Q9:

All content should be allowed to be submitted for classification

Q10:

All content should be classified. Weather content is approprite for public view in a public place is for the law to decide.

Q11:

The rights of people ie lack of r18 classification for video games.

Q12:

The internet should not be restricted. Illegal cyber activities are what law enforcment are for.

Q13:

Parental education. There are many forms of parental lockout. This is the job of a parent to raise their children correctly. Online content should NOT be restricted.

Q14:

I wasn't under the impression the current system was failing.

Q15:

I believe that the content should show the classification when it has been classified.

Q16:

The current system.

Q17:

Industry professionals have a much better understanding in content and classification and should be used to set up the code.

Q18:

Q19:

Not knowing the cost I can not answer this question

Q20:

Q21:

R18 classification for video games should be implemented. This has been a need for years but rejected by narrow minded and uniformed key political figures. R18 will give adults the choice they deserve while making the guides clearer.

Q22:

Having the same set of guidelines for all media.

Q23:

Q24:

None, no content on the internet should be filtered

Q25:

See Q24

Q26:

Yes

Q27:

I believe an introduction for the R18+ video games classification would greatly benefit everyone.

Q28:

Q29:

I believe an introduction for the R18+ video games classification would greatly benefit everyone.

Other comments:

I believe introducing the R18+ classification system would be extremely beneficial to everyone. Not only will it give good guidelines for people to judge content of games, it also gives adults the rights they deserve.
