Q1:

yes.

Q2:

suit content to the right age group.

Q3:

not really. boobs is boobs no matter where you see them.

Q4:

if the content in question is not overtly offensive then it would be a waste to classify it, so yes only if people complain should it be classified.

Q5:

i believe only mature content should be classified, pg and up.

Q6:

yes

Q7:

no

Q8:

no

Q9:

no

Q10:

yes, home content doesnt need to be classified

Q11:

depends on how easily the content is accessed. if u buy something you shouldnt complain about what you bought.

Q12:

age input into sites.

Q13:

parental control. there isn't much you can do kids are going to try and look at banned things.

Q14:

people still have magazines?

Q15:

when the content is open to public, and overtly offensive.

Q16:

governments should only be able to recommend not condemn content, it is up to the user to decide what to view and the government to provide knowledge on that choice.

Q17:

yes, pretty much anything would be more practical at the moment, if i am 18 and not allowed to view something just because its a bit violet isn't good enough. as long as its not true.

Q18:

content that is very violet or sexual in nature, that which could be viewed as offensive.

Q19:

on content that inst mass marketed, indie games etc.

Q20:

the lack of an r18 rating causes confusion.

Q21:

we need an r18 rating, i think G rating isnt needed, PG probably we do since someone has to be do something about it, the parent has to think "oh i better look into this before i let my child play."

Q22:

movies and games are very similar, they both create thoughts and evoke emotions in the user, they should be judged the same way.

Q23:

yes

Q24:

anything that involves a real person being forced to do something that don't want to do. but fictional games and films should be allowed no matter what the content as long as its fiction.

Q25:

no comment.

Q26:

there should just be a national classification law.

Q27:

no comment

Q28:

no comment

Q29:

peer reviews, expert reviews a wider reviewing leads to a more common answer.

Other comments:

bring knowledge to people about products and then let them make the right choice. everyone is entitled to make their own educated decision.
