First name: Steven
Last name: Bragg

Q1:
A new framework should be established from scratch to be implemented across all mediums including content like films, tv shows and video games.
Q2:
To limit the access of adult themes to children while allowing adults to access adult material.
Q3:
No, classification should be based on content.
Q4:
No, classification should be chosen by an impartial board that decides classification based purely on who the content is suited for.
Q5:
Indifferent.
Q6:
No, classification should be based on content.
Q7:
Indifferent.
Q8:
Indifferent.
Q9:
No, classification should be based on content.
Q10:
Indifferent but I would understand the restricting of public access to adult themes.
Q11:
Common Sense.
Q12:
Censorship isn't an effective measure. Informing individuals who wish to restrict their or their households access to online content is the most effective way.
Q13:
Children should be controlled by their parents not a public authority. Informing parents on how to use standard security features to limit their children's access to inappropriate content online should be considered.
Q14:
Indifferent.
Q15:
All content should display the classification that has been attached to it.
Q16:

Government Agencies should decide the content classification in consultation with Industry bodies who recommend the appropriate classification for content. Users should have a way to register complaints and concerns and that could be considered by the Government Agency.

Q17:

Yes.

Q18:

All content should be analysed individually and classified fairly.

Q19:

Indifferent.

Q20:

The difference between M and MA is sometimes confusing.

Q21:

The current classification categories (G,PG,M, MA and R) work in the end, just all media should be able to access this well rounded classification system.

Q22:

By allowing all media formats to access the well known G, PG, M, MA and R classification system.

Q23:

Yes.

Q24:

None, illegal content should be policed by the Police.

Q25:

No.

Q26:

Yes and it should be made well known by the Federal Government.

Q27:

Unsure.

Q28:

Yes.

Q29:

A well promoted, unified classification system that effectively manages children's access to adult content while still allowing adult's to access mature content at their will.

Other comments:

Video Games should be classified the same as Film and Television. Introduce a R rating and also effectively use the R rating for all content. If a film or video game is unsuitable for children make accessible only to adults.