Q1:

A new framework is required to include all the different media that are available

Q2:

The objective should be to provide a guide of the suitability of the content. Not to ban it.

Q3:

No. All content should be classified accordingly.

Q4:

No. All content should be classified into a category to allow individuals to make their choice based on the category.

Q5:

The potential impact of content is just that potential so no let the individual make their own choice.

Yes children content should be classified uniformly across the spectrom of media.

Q6:

No

Q7:

Yes

Q8:

Yes

Q9:

No

Q10:

No

Q11:

If the content is bought, free, or otherwise published then classification should be used to advise of the content.

Q12:

Parental guidance and monitoring

Q13:

Parental intervention and education of computer filters to restrict the individuals access to potential harm. Also the ability to hold the website publisher accountable for inappropriate or illegal content. Im sure given the option to remove the content or pay a fine the removal of the content would occur.

Q14:

Make sexually explicit material a subscription only service available from adult shops or direct from the publisher.

Q15:

All content.

Q16:

Advisory only. Illegal items should be refused.

Q17:

Sure. This way the target markets can be reached without restriction.

Q18:

Content that might offend should contain a warning. Sexually explicit material. Coarse language.

Religious content. Graphic violence. Everything should be advised.

Q19:

Classification should be equal and fair. A classification that is forced by government should be free.

Advisory classification is a community service not a business.

Q20:

I believe the classification system of G,M,MA15+ and R18+ are understood it would be ok to include sub headings for inappropriate content ie I for language s for sex etc.

Q21:

Maybe there should be a category for religious content. This would advise if there are any religiously sensitive content. A bit like the warning given about aboriginals watching a program may see persons who are deciced.

Q22:

Use of the same colors and shapes. Like the current system just kept the same across all the media.

Q23:

It should be the same classification system. It doesnt matter if it is a movie, magazine or computer game. There is an adult computer game market and they want to play adult content games. R18+ should be added to computer games.

Q24:

I would not like to think anyone wants to see children harmed in any way.

Q25:

Q26:

Yes consistence across states is needed.

Q27:

The scheme should cover all states and territories of australia

Q28:

Yes
