Q1:

It is quite simple. Modernize the current system by adding an R18+ rating for games.

Q2:

To ensure that Australians are no longer being segregated from the rest of the world when it comes to different forms of entertainment.

Q3:

This is a very poorly phrased question. No, the platform should have no influence on how the content is classified. It makes no difference whatsoever.

Q4:

All content must be classified, of course, but we must allow access to this content, regardless of what it may be.

Q5:

Yes, it should. Content designed for children is classified across all media under the same system.

The same should apply for content designed for adults. Games made for adults should be restricted to adults, just like movies for adults.

Q13:

It can't, and despite your best efforts, all that will result is inconvenience for the rest of Australia.

Parents must be held responsible, not you.

Q14:

It cannot

Q15:

When it is above a PG rating.

Q21:

For games, we need an R18+ rating. On numerous polls conducted by yourself, Australia clearly wants and needs one.

Q22:

Our classification system must be consistent. Either add an R rating for games, or ban all R rated movies. I suggest the first.

Q23:

YES! We have needed to do so for over 15 years.

Q24:

None. Freedom of speech. Besides, if someone wants to, they will access it anyway.

Other comments:

We need an R18+ classification for games. Australia is falling behind the rest of the world and its conservative ideas of censorship are forcing people to illegally import, download or modify material. The time has come to take action and introduce an fair classification system for games.
