

CI 932 R Aronson

First name: Rhys

Last name: Aronson

Q1:

The inquiry should focus on a new framework for classification so that it is uniform across all mediums and that the right classifications can be given to ensure an informed public.

Q2:

To Ensure the public is informed of the content of the classified materials and can make an informed judgment about whether to purchase them

Q3:

No, there have been no conclusive studies that show an appreciable difference of affect of media based on the method of consumption. However, the ease of access and average age of the consumers of that media should be considered (Video Games on average have a higher median age than television for example).

Q4:

If the content is hosted in a dynamic environment like the internet where classifying everything in sufficient timescales would be possible then yes.

Q5:

No, the most important role of the classification is to inform

Q6:

No, the most important part of the classification is to inform

Q7:

This depends on the manner and place it is being exhibiyed

Q8:

Yes

Q9:

No, the most important part of the classification is to inform

Q10:

Yes

Q11:

Q12:

Education, no technical method would be feasible of effective because systems like TOR and VPN breach them easily

Q13:

It should be the parents responsibility to monitor their children internet usage, not the government education, both of parents and retailers. Fines levied at retails similar to alcohol may be helpfull

Q14:

Q15:

Yes, the most important part of the classification is to inform

Q16:

To inform the public, not to coerce them.

Q17:

The ESRB in the USA seems to have an efficient and effective system, perhaps this would be an ideal model to look at.

Q18:

Q19:

Q20:

It depends on what segment of the community

Q21:

Yes, Video Games require an R18 category to ensure Adults have access to content they currently don't but should and parents are properly informed (some R18 content gets released under MA15+).

Q22:

An R18+ rating for Video Games would unify Television, Movies and Video Games

Q23:

Yes

Q24:

Child Pornography and that is it, however it should be prohibited via Federal Police enforcement rather than useless filtering systems

Q25:

No

Q26:

Yes, Ratings should be administered by the federal government

Q27:

Q28:

yes

Q29:

Other comments: