Last name: Wu

Q1:

The ALRC should focus on developing a new, simpler framework.

Q2:

It should give an overview on what content the game contains, not force people.

Q3:

Yes. It is impossible to classify everything on the internet, so that is unfeasible.

Q4:

I think everything sold in stores should be classified.

Q5:

No, No.

Q6:

Yes, yes. Let's be practical.

Q7:

No.

Q8:

No.

Q9:

Yes.

Q10:

No.

Q11:

None that I can think of

Q12:

Don't restrict access to content on the internet.

Q13:

It's their parents responsibility.

Q14:

It's their parent's responsibility

Q15:

When it is classified.

Q16:

Government: Classify things. Industry bodies: Display the classifications. Users: Decide to follow the advice or not.

Q17:

It would work for certain types of media like music - a simple explicit label would do.

Q18:

Music

Q19:

No

Q20:

Not sure

Q21:

I think the current system should be scrapped and have 3 categories. General/Mild, Somewhat, Everything Else.

Q22:

Use the same classifications.

Q23:

Yes.

Q24:

Nothing.

Q25:

No.

Q26:

Yes. Pass a federal law?

Q27:

Uhh, no idea.

Q28:

No idea.

Q29:

Can't think of any.

Other comments:

Don't limit access to content. The classification scheme should only be a guide.
