

Hi my name is Elie Farah and I live in Sydney NSW. I came from Lebanon in 1990 due to war in Lebanon. My family chose Australia to be in a free country and that the country is a Christian country, and we enjoy living here. I myself have Christian belief which I would like to pass on to my kids same way my father and mother passed them on to me. I don't agree with all the things that is happening in Australian that is conflicting with our religion beliefs and especially how these changes are happening and our kids are already as young kids changing minds about religion to be normal in society. This is slowly becoming the new norm in Australia.

I prefer that we get the opportunity to send our kids to a school which will work with our religion beliefs. Its not about discrimination as I have never been in any way a person who discriminates. We all live in a way that has to be respected and I feel that the way the Government is undertaking these reforms are discriminating me.

I don't want the schools to change unless we get a vote from all the Christian community to say otherwise.

Why should the rest of the non religious groups decide for us?

If you make these changes, the Christian ways will be destroyed.
