

From: [REDACTED]
To: Anti Discrimination Law
Subject: Fwd: review into Religious Education Institutions and Anti D laws
Date: Friday, 17 February 2023 12:09:05 PM

----- Forwarded message -----

From: [REDACTED]
Date: Fri, 17 Feb 2023 at 13:02
Subject: review into Religious Education Institutions and Anti D laws
To: <antidiscriminationlaw@arlc.gov.au>

dear sir/madam I write to express my views on the above survey that is current. Parents send their children to religious schools because they want them to have an education with a sound base that covers all aspects of a human, That is an education that looks after the body mind and spirit or soul. Public education focuses of body and mind but woefully neglects the spirit. The local religious school does not discriminate the child's background or religious beliefs.

Religious Institutions should FIRMLY have the exemption to employ people who will endorse the ethos and support the aims of the school.

There are many associations and organisations that would expect this. After all a Liberal government would not deliberately put a Communist or Nazi in their party.

Why should religious institutions be expected to employ people who have no interest in the ethos of the school and most likely actively undermine it as this proposed law would allow. It is not even a two way street as a person of faith would be prevented from demonstrating that faith but a person who is willing to berate that belief can do so with impunity.

People who do not share faith values have plenty of choice for employment in the wider community.

Anti discrimination laws are actually becoming discrimination laws against people of faith. Look at Israel Filou the manly sea eagles group and other instances where they were hounded for their beliefs. The wider public is not made to attend church temple mosque or any other place of worship so don't force those who do to deny them to follow secularism.

with regards R.Cassidy